I enjoyed Ken Weideman's article about, and especially his interview with artist Sheldon Skillie ("Breakdancing with the Spirits," June 5). While I live too far away to attend the gallery showing, I've followed and appreciate his works. He seems to be able to shift media with fine attention to the details needed to successfully capture each individual theme. I wish him success with his showing and hope you can follow up with more information about his previous gallery displays in the Pacific Northwest. I find his work very impressive.

Marcy Burstiner's fine article in The Journal ("Art Attack," May 29) prompted me to write a letter, for once not excoriating some foible, but in appreciation of sentiments so finely crafted. In a time of acute polarization, one or another view is expressed so strongly, opposing views are belittled by implication, if not outright dismissal. Burstiner's exposition scaled impossible heights by her balanced examination of an issue we should all consider: Select any option, but be aware of the real and diverse consequences.

The process of confirmation bias stymies objectivity in such a way as to mock thoughtfulness by allowing our prejudices to shape, not just what we think, but what we allow others to think.

After the Poll

Editor:

While I appreciated your article, "Your Doorstep... Where Elections Are Won" (June 5), after this election I'm not sure that's where elections are won. The turnout for this election was pitiful and a large part of the MIAs were younger people who, it seems, don't vote.

I phoned banked for Kerrigan and soon realized that the registered voters I was calling were almost all senior citizens and almost none were in their 20s and 30s. I understand why so many younger people are disenfranchised, feel that voting doesn't matter, but they cost this election dearly.

Kerrigan, among others, didn't get elected because the more progressive potential voters didn't vote and many of his espoused supporters didn't get off their rears and go to the polling place. I think many citizens here feel that we need a change on the board of supes but many of those same people didn't vote. Conservatives tend to be more reliable voters. What message does that send to those who want to see some progressive thinking in our government? It should tell them to walk the walk, to take some responsibility.

I tried registering voters at the Co-op and targeted younger people. I was told over and over that they weren't interested. They can't then complain if they get the world their inaction gives them. Well, the Gang of Four got the message, they can safely shred the environment and more to fatten their supporters pockets. The non-voters have told them so. But voting doesn't matter, does it?

Sylvia De Rooy, Eureka

Editor:

A comment on the Journal's otherwise excellent election coverage: In your coverage of Ballot Measures, Measure N, the bond proposal for the Southern Humboldt Unified School District, was indeed "to renovate and repair" facilities, but there's more to the story than that. Voters in Southern Humboldt approved a bond issue several years ago, but the district sold the maximum number of permissible bonds before the renovations and repairs were completed and had to return to the voters for more money to issue new bonds. Southern Humboldt voters said "no" to more bonds and higher property taxes to cover for the district's ineptitude in selling the original bonds.

God Getting Old

Just for practice, I created another planet. Took me a week, and it was still unmanned!
And now I'm stiff and sore all over.

Went to cancel it, but couldn't remember where I put it.
Now it'll probably run into one of the others!

So I went to check out Earth.
It had been a while. My god, it was overgrown! And all the Non-Believers! More sodomy than at Sodom! I went to wash it clean, but they said I promised not to do that again!
Now, when did I do that?

Told the Pope, never mind the
"Be fruitful and multiply"— he said it would never fly at the Synod, but to check back with him next visit. Smote him down — an eyblink later there was white smoke, and another in his place.

Took a chariot out of there — halfway to Heaven I realized the turn signal was still on!

Hard to relax — maybe a little nap —
but here are all the original Hell's Angels running across the lawn!
Now, where did I put that brimstone?

A BALD-FACED HORNET NEST.

At Coast Central Credit Union in Arcata, the newcomers had set up camp outside and were menacing customers. A similar group had taken up inside a shed in Kneeland where a man keeps his lawnmower. Yet another hung around, prickly-humored and uninvited, too close to a home's window and garden hose.

These were the new neighbors, and they were not welcome.

"Is there something we can do that's constructive instead of just killing them?" asked Ken Collins, a lawyer and musician whose tenant in Kneeland was afraid to enter a shed now because of the hornets.

What Collins and others are really wondering is, whatever happened to the hornet-getters? You know, the Weiderts, whom the Journal featured in July 2010. The Grass Valley family used to come here regularly to collect our unwanted hornets — for free — because they could sell them to a company that makes anti-venom. They would set up a contact number with a local answering service, and when they got enough calls they'd drive up. But the Weiderts haven't come here lately, and their phone number is out of service.

We finally tracked down Ryan Weidert via Facebook and he says he's moved on to other things. His parents live in Washington now and collect north of Seattle. His brothers still live in central California and still collect hornets, but they weren't getting enough calls in Humboldt to warrant the trip up here.

So what's a pestered Humboldtian with a fat, papery hornet's nest to do?

You have options. There are local exterminators who are skilled in hornet and wasp removal. And a few of our many local beekeepers do hornet and wasp removal, generally for a fee. For instance, Dick LaForge, of Freshwater, charges $35 an hour, including driving time, with an hour minimum charge.

LaForge, who used to refer people to the Weiderts, says he doesn't do hornet removal for the money. In fact, he tries to talk people out of it.

"I'm hoping I don't get too much business out of this, because I have other things to do," says the beekeeper, gardener and player of low brass instruments who is "retired, supposedly."

More important, he says, hornets are beneficial. They eat caterpillars and other insects that chew up gardens. They're pollinators. Some might bother you at picnics and try to eat your hotdog. Some won't.

"We should try to live with them," LaForge says. "If a nest is high on a house — for example, under second story eaves — or high in a tree, [they] will go about their business and not bother anyone. They are dangerous if the nest is within 10 feet of the ground in an area where people frequently pass by, especially if the nest could be accidentally hit with something. Nests in shrubbery are dangerous as any shaking makes them defensive. Nests in the ground are not dangerous if you can avoid disturbing that area, but quite dangerous if anyone could step on it or walk very near it."

If they are not in a dangerous place, leave them alone, he advises. They are part of nature's balance. And, anyway, they'll be gone by winter.

We have three species here: Black and yellow Dolichovespula arenaria builds grey paper balls under the eaves of roofs and in shrubs and trees. Vespula alascensis, also black and yellow, builds similar nests underground and in cavities (these are called yellow jackets). And Dolichovespula maculata is black and white and makes gray paper ball nests under eaves and in shrubs and trees; it's called the bald-faced hornet. All three have the same kind of life cycle, says LaForge.

"A single queen starts a nest in spring, raises a few female workers, who then help raise more," he says. "The colony gradually grows in size and number until, in mid to late summer, it can have thousands. In fall, queens and drones are produced. These mate, and the queens hide and hibernate individually. The nest is abandoned and is not re-used the next year. In spring the queens each try to start a new nest."

That said, our hornets are not endangered, so LaForge says it's OK to remove some.

"I probably did 25 to 30 nest removals last year," he says. That's out of the 50 to 60 calls he received; he talked about half of his callers out of removing nests.

People have been calling him since April, this year, and he expects more as high summer progresses. When he's hired, he drives over, dons his beesuit, flips a plastic bag over the nest and removes it, then swats stragglers dead. The removal typically takes 15 to 20 minutes. The hornets who aren't caught might survive nestless three days, and might try to rebuild.

Others remove nests, too, including Drew Barrett of McKinleyville who says he does it all over Humboldt County. The Humboldt County Beekeepers Association can direct you to these hornet-getters: humboldtbeekeepers.org. Or you can call your pest guys.

That's what Aileen Arrieta did to get rid of her bald-faced hornets (famous all over Trinidad). She didn't want to pay LaForge's travel time and rent a ladder, and she'd chucked the self-help option after scaring herself silly watching "a few really terrifying YouTube videos about hornet removal."

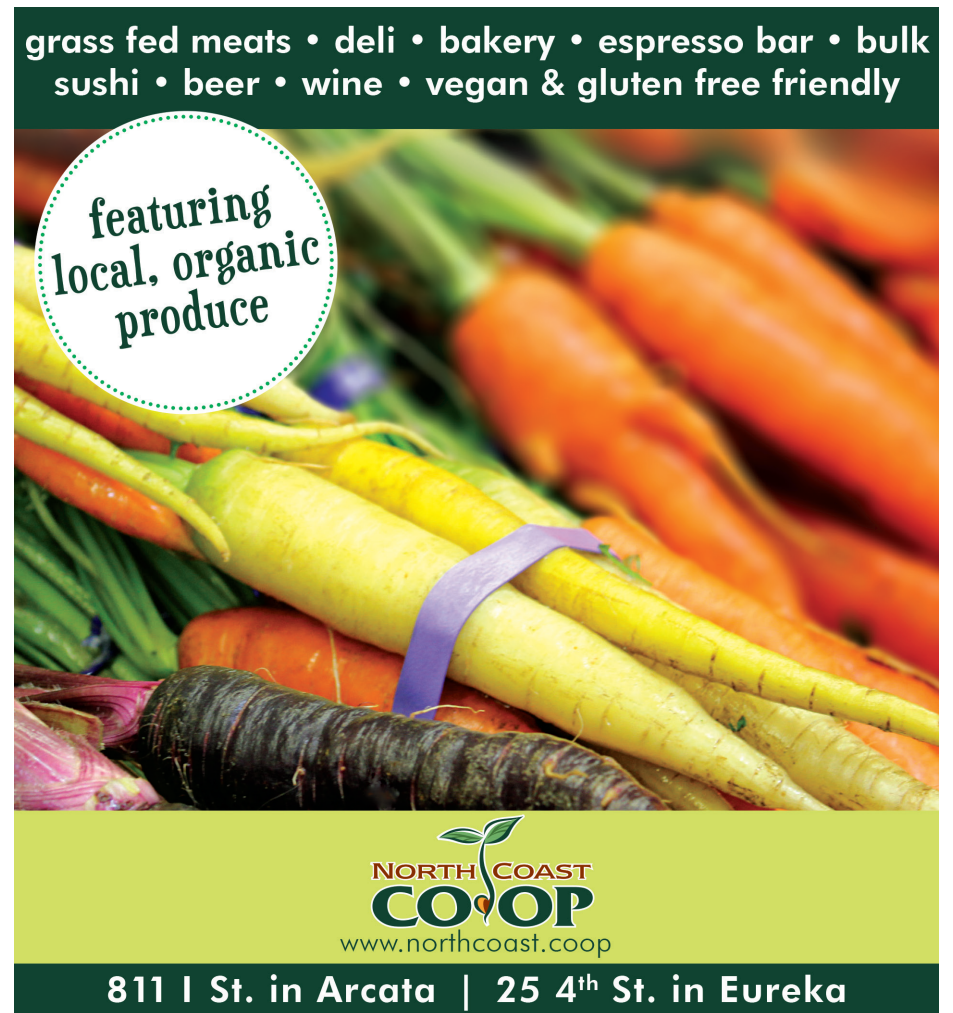

In the end, she says, "it was uneventful." ●

COURTS / CRIME

Eccentric Powerhouse Tapped for Murder Defense

After months of telling a federal court he intended to plead guilty to charges that he murdered one of the workers tending his marijuana farm, a Kneeland man has reconsidered and appears ready to take his case to trial.

Mikal Xylon Wilde, 32, was indicted federally March 1, 2012 on six counts, including murder in the commission of a narcotics offense, for the Aug. 25, 2010 fatal shooting of Mario Roberto Juarez-Madrid, of Santa Rosa, Guatemala, on a large-scale marijuana growing operation near Kneeland. Wilde — the first Humboldt County resident to be federally prosecuted for murder in decades — began working toward a plea agreement with the feds in December, after they decided not to seek the death penalty in the case.

In March, Wilde told the court he had entered into “an agreement in principal” that just needed a bit more time for review. Then, in May, Wilde asked for a final continuance in the case to allow a private defense attorney — J. Tony Serra — to offer him a second opinion on the agreement. Apparently, Serra didn’t like the deal, as Wilde appeared in court earlier this month and informed the judge he was leaving the offer on the table, ditching his public defender (Daniel Blank), hiring Serra and prepared to proceed to trial on July 22.

The interesting about face is made all the more so by Wilde’s choice of attorney. The long-haired Serra is a bit of a cult figure in the legal profession. He famously won the acquittal of Black Panther founder Huey Newton in a high-profile murder case but North Coasters will likely remember him most for his successful representation of a host of Redwood Summer protesters and his involvement in the lawsuit against Humboldt County and Eureka law enforcement officers for swabbing pepper spray into the eyes of nine protesters in the lobby of Pacific Lumber Co. offices in Scotia and then-Congressman Frank Riggs’ Eureka office.

Known for having taken a vow of poverty, wearing hand-me-down suits — sometimes tailored with staples and duct tape — Serra made national headlines in 2005 when he was imprisoned for tax evasion after refusing to pay income taxes in protest of the Iraq War. (Serra was similarly imprisoned in the 1970s for failing to pay taxes in protest of the Vietnam War).

According to an article in the L.A. Times, Serra took his 2005 prison sentence in stride. “I would rather get down with inmates,” Serra told the paper. “They’re interesting, they’re dramatic, they’ve overstepped the bounds of society. Some of it is high principle; some of it is low principle. But these people are extraordinary. They’re not ordinary. These are my people.”

Unusual antics and prison stunts aside, Serra is also a damn good lawyer, boasting what colleagues call a “remarkable acquittal rate.”

Wilde faces life in federal prison and a fine of up to $10 million if convicted on murder, conspiracy and marijuana charges. He was arrested Aug. 26, 2010 after officers responded to the CAL FIRE airbase in Kneeland to find a man suffering from a gunshot wound to the face, and another dead at a nearby property.

During a hearing to determine if there was enough evidence to hold Wilde to stand trial in Humboldt County before the feds took on the case, testimony indicated the shooting came after a dispute broke out between Wilde and his employees.

Just a year after emerging from Chapter 7 bankruptcy protection, Wilde was apparently again in financial trouble, according to court records, with a bank moving to foreclose on his home on Greenwood Heights Road near Kneeland after Wilde fell behind some $33,000 in mortgage payments. Wilde had allegedly invested heavily in a marijuana growing operation near Kneeland on a property he’d purchased under the name Ashland Ranch LLC. Wilde allegedly hired three men from the Sacramento area — Juarez-Madrid, Fernando Lopez and Christopher Bigelow — to work the sprawling hillside property, which contained more than 1,500 marijuana plants.

The dispute allegedly broke out after Wilde informed the men, who’d been living on the property for a couple months, that he was running out of money and couldn’t afford fuel for a watering truck the men were using to irrigate the property. Instead, Wilde allegedly told the men, they’d have to water the plants by hand. According to preliminary hearing testimony, the men balked, asking to be paid for their work and taken home. Wilde allegedly told the men he’d come back later in the day to pay them and take them home. But when he returned to the property the next day, he allegedly opened fire, killing Juarez-Madrid and seriously wounding Lopez.

Serra was not immediately available for comment.

ENVIRONMENT / NATURAL RESOURCES

Gray Wolf Listed as Endangered

Following a crowded meeting, California Fish and Wildlife commissioners approved the listing of the gray wolf as an endangered species in the state.

Close to 200 people filled the conference room of Fortuna’s Riverlodge conference room June 4 to attend a California Fish and Wildlife Commission public hearing on the topic of large predators. Included in the itinerary was public comment on whether or not to list the gray wolf under the California Endangered Species Act. The crowd, which quickly spilled out of the conference room, sported a proportionate mix of furry “wolf-ear” beanies and cowboy hats, illustrating the wide schism between local ranchers and environmentalists on this issue.

“It’s hard to find a species in the West that provokes more passionate opinion from such a diverse range of people for more different reasons,” said Chuck Bonham, Director of the California Department of Fish and Wildlife, “Before we open for public comment I ask that everyone keep it civil. At the end of the day we’re all Californians.”

His call for civility was pertinent as public understanding and opinion of the gray wolf’s role in California’s future is an area with limited common ground. Some see the gray wolf’s listing as a non-issue as the species does not have a presence in the state, but the recent migration of a gray male wolf dubbed OR-7 across the Oregon border into Northern California has raised concerns that the wolves may be expanding their territory. That morning a Portland-based news affiliate reported that OR-7’s mate had a litter of pups in the Siskiyou. The effect of wolves on livestock is a hot-button issue in many other states in which wolf packs are active, including Montana and Wyoming.

Bonham says that the department anticipates there will be an active wolf population in California within the next decade.

To this end, the California Department of Fish and Wildlife prepared a wolf management plan. The management plan would include reparations for lost livestock and opportunities to manage the species through hunting. Many in favor of listing the wolf as an endangered species expressed the opinion that this is an inadequate response to the wolf’s re-emergence in California, and they fear that, unprotected, wolves will be poisoned, shot or otherwise killed. Many livestock owners fear that if the wolf is listed as endangered they will have no way to defend their livestock against predation.

Public comment on the issue topped three hours and was punctuated by bursts of applause and the occasional exasperated sigh from either side. It included statements from local ranchers, activists, scientists, 1st District Supervisor Rex Bohn (against the listing), 3rd District Supervisor Mark Lovelace (for the listing), small children in furry hats, two speakers who burst into tears and at least one song.

“The wolf is a killing machine,” said Bohn.

“The wolf is a mother of us all,” sang a pro-wolf supporter.

Following the commission’s decision, Natalynne DeLapp of the Environmental Protection Information Center said, “It’s a good day for wolves in California and beyond.”

Eat Your Weedies

By Grant Scott-Goforth

Will this be the most pot-friendly World Cup ever? In host nation Brazil, marijuana possession is tolerated, if illegal — an arrest leads to a warning and community service, according to the “legality of cannabis by country” entry on Wikipedia (yeah, yeah, don’t use it as a resource, kids).

Of course, the U.S. men’s team will be there, amid much being made in the international media of our country’s burgeoning legalization. Also in attendance will be a number of nations with relaxed or nonexistent possession laws: Uruguay, Colombia, Netherlands, Iran. Of course, there are hardline nations too: Algeria, Japan, South Korea (where citizens can be charged for smoking outside of the country — take note, national team).

Puff your stuff at home, Humboldt, and check out the games starting Thursday at Big Pete’s or your favorite sports bar.

- Speaking of national marijuana policies, Mexico, which in recent years decriminalized personal possession (and made this year’s World Cup cut), appears to be mulling further decriminalization of pot. President Enrique Peña Nieto said the U.S. trend toward legalization means Mexico needs to examine its own laws.

Peña Nieto told the Spanish newspaper El País (which has Central and South American editions) that Mexico’s was a “failed policy.”

“We can’t continue on this road of inconsistency between the legalization we’ve had in some places, particularly in the most important consumer market, the United States, and in Mexico where we continue to criminalize production of marijuana,” he told the paper (via the Toronto Sun).

- Another neighbor to our south is considering marijuana legalization: Jamaica, the Caribbean island most famous for pot (and whose national team did not qualify for the World Cup). Some Jamaican policy makers, marijuana farmers and businessmen are eager to capitalize on the marijuana tourism that they think legalization would provide, according to USA Today. It’s not unlikely that many Jamaicans, who’ve seen their culture co-opted and semi-understood abroad as one big ganja celebration, could benefit from the dollars of America’s spring-breakin’ greeks or Australia’s hard-partying holidayers.

The article says that the island, only about 400 square miles bigger than Humboldt County, is home to 37,000 acres of marijuana farms.

- Humboldt’s stories are everywhere. It seems more and more often a national or international news outlet runs a large story covering some aspect of the marijuana subculture. The coverage is often good, sometimes great and only occasionally completely misses the mark.

The latest in the great column comes from literary magazine The Believer, whose Lee Ellis spent some time at “The Bougiest Trim Scene in Humboldt.” It’s a fascinating read, following closely a large grow op’s cook as he deals with the complicated interpersonal, workplace, environmental, intellectual and emotional strife that comes with being on “the mountain.”

An excerpt (find a link to the full story at northcoastjournal.com):

— Those growers who want to keep their shipments of marijuana off public roads as much as possible pay fellow growers, like Ethan, the owner and chief executive of the farm where Dan cooked, for the right to use his farm’s roads to bypass county, state, and federal throughways. The customary toll, according to Dan, is two hundred to four hundred dollars per trip. He’d collected a few of these tolls himself.

— On the farm, Ethan’s rule was omnipotent. He was supervisor when Dan cooked, lender when he needed a loan to start his own patch, and sole distributor when Dan sold. “It’s a little fiefdom,” Dan said. As salt in the wound, the boss’s crop was coming in strong, again. “Guy’s never had a bad year. His neighbors quietly hate him.”

— Later, Dario and Brianna squabbled in the parking lot, surrounded by majestic Toyotas, their door handles gummed with resin. The moon turned some distant ridge elegant. There was a forest that backed up to the bar, the gnarled dark of it, an untrodden path in there, one sensed, that led to another bar, like this one but mountains away, with some other trim team there doing the same shit. ●

'BAIT AND SWITCH'

Did Anthem Blue Cross use Obamacare to swindle Humboldt customers?

By Thadeus Greenson

It's early March, and a group of local insurance agents are at wit's end. The enrollment period for health insurance plans offered under Obamacare is in its final throes, and the headaches began just as soon as Covered California got off the ground. There's the typical stuff one might expect from a massive overhaul of the nation's health care system that's bringing insurance to millions of people for the first time: widespread confusion, poor communication, huge backlogs and entire days wasted on the phone, sitting on hold.

But it is a deeper problem that's bringing these seven agents together to pen a letter to North Coast Congressman Jared Huffman on this day. Though none will out and out say it, they've all realized that Anthem Blue Cross' published provider network — its list of doctors with whom the insurance company has contracted to provide services to its policy holders — is a sham.

"We are sitting on a powder keg waiting for the fuse to reach its destination and it is getting closer by the day," reads the March 4 letter to Huffman, written by Steven Justus, vice president at Anderson Robinson Starkey Insurance, and co-signed by six others. "Hospitalizations, surgeries and a myriad of other expensive medical procedures will reveal themselves as 'out of network' and insureds will be left with extremely large bills, perhaps to the extent of threatening their homes and savings through no fault of their own."

As the agents note in the letter, "it's a little complicated," but the short of it is that Anthem Blue Cross — which insures about 90 percent of Humboldt County's 5,600 Covered California patients — claimed it was under contract with hundreds of local doctors to provide "in-network" care to its patients when, in reality, few local physicians outside of the Open Door Community Health system had agreed to take the company's new plans. That left Anthem's Humboldt customers to either seek out one of the few in-network providers under the policies or risk hefty bills for out-of-network care.

"It's a bait and switch problem," says Huffman flatly, dismissing the notion that Anthem's flawed network provider lists could have simply been the result of pervasive confusion with the massive rollout of the Affordable Care Act. "Frankly, when you initially post online for the people who are shopping for policies a list that includes just about every provider in Humboldt County and represent they're part of your network and you don't actually have contracts with any of them, that's a problem and that's outrageous, really. We need to see some accountability for this."

Widely considered the most significant overhaul of the nation's health care system since the passage of Medicaid in 1965, the Affordable Care Act leaves virtually no aspect of health care delivery in the United States untouched. (See the Journal's March 6 cover story, "The Faces of Obamacare.") It mandates that just about everyone in the country secure health insurance or pay a fine. It prohibits insurers from denying policies to people with pre-existing conditions or from dropping folks because they get sick. The act also greatly expands subsidized policies for the poor, and mandates that plans cover preventative care and provide coverage for mental health and addiction services on par with coverage of physical ailments.

But the single biggest change under Obamacare is the creation of health insurance marketplaces, known as exchanges, that offer standard, government regulated plans online in a format that allows customers to compare plans side by side. The Golden State's exchange, dubbed Covered California, enrolled more than 1.2 million people, including 5,679 in Humboldt County, for its first year.

Statewide, a total of 11 insurers put plans on the exchange, including small-timers such as Stern Health Advantage and Contra Costa Health Plan, mid-sized groups such as Health Net and Kaiser Permanente, and the two giants, Anthem Blue Cross and Blue Shield. Anthem quickly cornered the market in Humboldt, offering three tiers of Covered California plans beginning in October. The plans, one local insurance agent says, “looked good on paper.”

Sitting around a private table at the Ingomar Club one afternoon in March, a couple weeks after sending the letter to Huffman, several local insurance agents talked Obamacare while picking at their Cajun chicken salads. They vented about “the botched rollout” and a host of administrative failures. There was the website crash that necessitated their spending days on end faxing forms to Sacramento, the inability to find anyone to answer simple questions and the horrible lag-time in processing applications.

There was the story about a guy with a heart condition who submitted his application in November and supplied his credit card number to pay his premium. The state finally processed the paperwork in January and tried to run his card, but it had expired. By the time the guy found out his card was denied, he’d been living without health insurance for more than two months. But the big concern, the one that had brought them to the club that day and spurred the letter to Huffman, was the powder keg.

Anthem’s network did not include St. Joseph Hospital or Humboldt Medical Specialists — the North Coast’s largest group of specialized physicians — but few seemed to know that, including the two organization’s billing staffs, according to the agents. Someone, they warned, was going to go to the hospital for a specialty procedure only to find out, after the fact, that the care was out-of-network and face tens of thousands of dollars in bills. “They cure ‘em of one thing but they’re going to get the bill and have a heart attack,” Justus says, adding soberly that someone could lose their house or their life savings in such a scenario.

Justus and the other agents at lunch that day — Jeff Pauli and Jeff Miller — made clear they weren’t pointing a finger at anyone, neither the insurance companies nor local doctors. “It’s a confluence of events and unfortunate circumstances,” Justus says.

But, while local doctors were left with the frustration of telling longstanding patients they could no longer see them under their new insurance policies and agents were left worrying they’d sold clients health care’s version of the bridge to nowhere, Anthem seemed to be doing just fine. After all, the insurance giant was pulling in premiums — averaging some $300 a month — from thousands of Humboldt County residents while doling out physician reimbursement rates lower than Medi-Cal and Medicare, the government subsidized insurance programs for the poor and elderly. One can imagine it being a pretty profitable business model.

Huffman says he’s been keeping close tabs on the situation since receiving the agents’ letter and sitting down with them a few weeks later. Covered California has been hitting rough patches throughout his district, but nothing quite like what he’s seen in Humboldt. For his part, the congressman said he’s simply not buying the notion that Anthem’s provider list somehow got jumbled in the push to launch Covered California, or that the company didn’t realize that most local physicians had turned down its low-ball reimbursement offers. “I think these are very sophisticated actors, and I think they know exactly what they’re doing,” he says.

paper. It's Anthem's "in-network" provider list which was initially put up online, or what's left of it. Figas keeps the original list in a three-ring binder and it sits a few inches thick. From that, Figas has whittled it down to a list that, at just three pages long, is as accurate as she can make it before turning it over to the California Medical Society for a sit-down meeting the group has scheduled with Anthem in the near future.

The original list was a mess, Figas says. There were doctors listed under the wrong specialties and docs who had long since picked up their practices and moved out of the county. Some doctors — like the physicians in the Open Door system, including Chief Medical Officer Bill Hunter — were listed multiple times, sometimes at each of Open Door's eight locations. St. Joseph Hospital President David O'Brien made the list, even though he's worked as an administrator for the last 14 years and doesn't see patients. Figas said emergency room doctors also made the list and, perhaps the most shameful of all, so did locum docs, or doctors who happened to fill in locally on a temporary basis at some point in the past.

"How does Joe Public know these aren't doctors here that you can go see?" Figas asks. "It's nuts."

More troubling than that, she says, are the doctors who made the list despite having turned down Anthem's contract offer. According to multiple sources, when Anthem was preparing to roll out its Covered California plans it took a hard line negotiating with local doctors, offering reimbursement levels 65 percent lower than for its traditional plans. That left most local doctors looking at taking a substantial loss for every Covered California patient they treated, and most walked away. But Anthem left many on its in-network provider lists anyway, leading some of their patients to purchase Anthem plans, thinking their doctor was in-network and the transition would be seamless.

Instead, those patients were faced with a difficult choice: find

Having trouble with Obamacare?

If so, the California Department of Managed Health Care wants to hear from you. "If people are struggling, we want to hear about their problems, both because we want to help them solve them and because we want to know what's going on in the marketplace," says department spokeswoman Marta Green. a new doctor, look for a new insurance plan or pay often exorbitant out-of-network fees to keep seeing their doctor of choice. The situation left local docs in difficult spots as well, sometimes forcing them to say goodbye to patients they'd been seeing for years.

Since January, the state has received some 1,800 complaints about Covered California, according to Marta

Green, a spokeswoman for the Department of Managed Health Care, which oversees the new program. While the vast majority of those complaints were about the enrollment process — exactly the kinds of things the Humboldt insurance agents were griping about over lunch — Green said 211 have been about issues with accessing providers, whether it be difficulties finding a primary care physician or the accuracy of plans' physician networks.

Green's department was also copied on a letter sent earlier this month from Huffman and six other Democratic members of Congress to Covered California Director Peter Lee. While the letter is full of flowery language congratulating Lee on a "successful first open enrollment period,"

Re: Urgent Insurance Problems

Dear Congressman Huffman:

I am writing as the voice for a collection of long time professional insurance agents from the North Coast of California (Humboldt County). We have urgent concerns for the welfare of our clients and all others who have

1. enrolled through Covered California (CovCa) in individual health insurance 2. Have enrolled with private health insurance carriers as individuals with effective dates from 1-1-14 and 3. individuals enrolled prior to 1-1-14 on individual health plans.

In Short, as of 1-1-2014 the provider network for Anthem Blue Cross and Blue Shield of California has become unworkable, leaving thousands of individuals at risk. Even worse—they have no knowledge that their providers are no longer in-network. St. Joseph Hospital, our major regional hospital, is among those no longer in-network.

We are sitting on a powder keg waiting for the fuse to reach its destination and it is getting closer by the day. Hospitalizations, surgeries and a myriad of other expensive medical procedures will reveal themselves as "out of network" and insureds will be left with extremely large bills perhaps to the extent of threatening their homes and savings through no fault of their own.

It is a little complicated. We would appreciate time to fill you in on the details. We first want to alert you to the danger your constituents (and our clients) are facing and to ask for more of your time to fill you in on the situation and, subsequently, your help. We know this is a State matter but Anthem is a national company and very sensitive to their reputation of late.

We are looking forward to hearing from you.
Thank you for your time,

it also sends the firm message that more needs to be done to ensure adequate access to health care services; that more oversight is needed. "We are hearing all too often about consumers who are finding themselves surprised, confused and unacceptably burdened by the lack of local providers covered by their plans," the lawmakers write. "Clearly, there is still work to be done on improving network adequacy, especially in rural communities."

Some eight months after it began enrolling patients, Anthem is beginning to expand its network on the North Coast, although — as the company did not respond to inquiries for this story — it's not exactly clear why. But, over the last month, Anthem has returned to the bargaining table with a number of local doctors and brought more providers into the fold. Perhaps most importantly, St. Joseph Hospital is now in the company's Covered California network, joining Mad River Hospital, which has participated from the outset.

Humboldt Medical Specialists, however, remains an out of network provider, according to Rick Igram, St. Joseph Health System's vice president for contracting. Igram says efforts are ongoing to get the specialty group included under Anthem's plans, but it hasn't happened just yet.

Surveying the local landscape of Anthem's in-network providers, it's clear things are improving, says Martin Love, chief executive officer of the Humboldt-Del Norte Independent Practice Association. The network, he says, has picked up a host of providers over the last month. "I'm certainly very happy things seems to be going better," Love says. "I think we just all wish they'd gone this way from the start."

Was it the Congressional attention? Did the state's oversight groups — the Department of Managed Health Care and the Department of Insurance — prod Anthem behind the scenes, making clear they were out of compliance with Affordable Care Act provider-to-patient ratios? It's unclear. But what is clear is that even Anthem's newfound push to expand its network has created some problems locally.

Humboldt with its take-it-or-leave-it approach to negotiations, some took it. Open Door, for example, decided it was treating many of the Covered California patients before they had insurance, so any level of compensation — not matter how meager — would be an improvement. A few other providers opted to take the contract and provide the care at a loss because they felt it was the right thing to do and their practices could sustain the hit.

Now, six months or so later, these providers, locked into three-year contracts, are watching as Anthem comes back to the table offering higher rates. "These physicians who did sign up at the beginning and accepted that miserably low reimbursement rate are kind of being punished," explains Huffman. The congressman points out that this situation is exacerbated by a provision of Obamacare that makes it illegal for physicians to discuss contract information among each other, leaving insurance companies with much of the bargaining power against a fractured community of doctors. Huffman said he and other lawmakers are working to change that provision of the law to level the playing field a bit.

Catherine Markle, the billing manager at Eureka Family Practice, says her physicians' group simply couldn't accept Anthem's contract offer the first time around, saying it would have put them out of business. But the practice's out-of-network designation was devastating to some patients, who assumed one Anthem Blue Cross plan was the same as the next, and couldn't understand why their physicians wouldn't accept the Covered California plans. Markle says frustrated and distraught patients became the norm for a few months in the practice's billing department.

But Anthem recently came calling again and, on May 1, entered into a contract with Eureka Family Practice. Markle says she can't discuss the terms of the three-year contract, but says: "We were able to come to a place where both parties were happy." Markle's voice lights up as she describes calling some of the practice's long-standing patients who had switched to Covered California policies and consequently been forced to look elsewhere for their medical care to inform them they and their policies would be welcomed back with open arms. "I was able to make those calls and it was a wonderful thing," she says. "We were never happy not taking it. That was never a good place for us."

With some practices, such as Open Door, getting terribly low reimbursement rates while others have negotiated more reasonable ones, Huffman says the situation is untenable. "It's not a model for sustainable health care moving forward, so we've got to get this fixed," he says.

There are plenty of other issues to fix as well, especially in rural areas like Humboldt. While Figas agrees getting the in-network provider lists straight and getting more local doctors under contract with Anthem Blue Cross is a priority, she says changes under the Affordable Care Act are putting an increased strain on an already frayed system in Humboldt County. "Being in a rural area, we don't have the provider base," she says.

Even before Obamacare, there was a shortage of physicians locally, she says, noting that more and more local docs are nearing, or have passed, retirement age. "Every time we lose a physician, their patients have to be absorbed into someone else's practice," she says. The system was already stretched, Figas says, and now there are some 9,000 additional MediCal and Covered California patients, many of whom didn't have insurance before. "If you already have shortages and (doctors) are booked solid, giving people insurance and access doesn't help the problem on the other side," she says.

From an insurance company's perspective, Humboldt County poses some unique challenges. Sean Barry, a spokesman for Blue Shield of California, says it comes down to a supply and demand issue. Because doctors in Humboldt are in high demand, he says their practices are already bulging at the seams and they don't feel the need to make concessions to take on new patients.

"It's mostly a supply issue," Barry explains. "Generally, we've seen when there are fewer providers over a larger region, we see higher costs. Also in lower population densities, there's not the economies of scale you'd find in an urban area." From Blue Shield's perspective, Barry says it's a constant balancing act: The company wants to contract with enough doctors to treat policy holders but also needs to be careful not to overextend. "It's a challenge in the North Coast and in the North Eastern areas of the country," he says. "It's a balance, we need to meet adequacy requirements, but we also are very attentive to what the premium is going to be (for customers). That's a balance that we've been looking at and will continue to look at in the coming years."

It seems that's the challenge for all involved in healthcare on the North Coast: finding balance. Currently, Huffman says he sees too much power in the hands of insurance companies, and particularly Anthem Blue Cross, which holds a near monopoly on the Covered California market locally. But the congressman seems quick to take on anyone who would point to what's happening in Humboldt as a sign that Obamacare is fatally flawed.

"I'm a fan of the Affordable Care Act," Huffman says. "It's an important reform and moves us in the right direction, but we've got some work to do to make sure the implementation is successful, and that's what this is all about." If anything, Huffman says, Obamacare didn't go quite far enough. "I continue to believe we need a public option in the mix to keep insurance companies honest, but if we can just hold them accountable, there's every reason to believe the system should work better now that we've managed to get most people covered."

And Huffman pledges that he will continue to pressure Covered California, and the state's departments of managed health care and insurance to continue to hold Anthem's feet to the fire. But, he says, at least under Obamacare, there's a fire burning.

"I think anyone who thought this was going to be smooth and seamless and without challenges was naive," he says. "Remember that the context before the Affordable Care Act was insurance companies overreaching and gouging and dropping patients for technicalities and preexisting conditions. So, I never thought that, with the passage of this law, insurance companies would stop engaging in questionable practices. This is what they do." ●

WILDFLOWER SPECIALTY FOODS

Most salad dressing is not located in the Produce Department of your local grocery store, but then Wildflower Specialty's Food Tofu Tahini and the new Humboldt Hemp Vinaigrette is not like other salad dressings. According to owners Patrick & Darcy Quinn, you will find these locally made all natural salad dressings refrigerated in the produce section of Wildberries Marketplace, Eureka Natural Foods, North Coast Co-op and all of the Murphy's Market locations. Some may recall the dressing's origins at Arcata vegetarian & vegan restaurant The Sprouted Seed, which is now Wildflower Cafe & Bakery — voted Best Vegetarian restaurant by North Coast Journal readers. Before being bottled in 1993, patrons brought in mason jars to fill up and take home this delicious dressing. If you haven't tried it yet, we suggest you do as the label directs and try it on potatoes, steamed veggies, rice, quinoa, sandwiches and, of course, your garden fresh salad.

HASTA BE PASTA

It was a circuitous route for the Venturis to reach Humboldt County — Bologna, Italy to Beatrice, Nebraska and finally to Arcata. “We love nature,” says Gianpaolo Venturi. “We love the ocean and our house is in the middle of the forest.” But the Bologna native also brought his talent for northern Italian cuisine. After a career at a Beatrice supermarket, Gianpaolo and Madeliene Venturi were beckoned by daughter Elizabeth, an HSU marine biology major, who knew her parents would love Humboldt. And finding a welcoming kitchen at Casa Lindra in Aldergrove Industrial Park, the Venturis began combining their market retail experience with Bolognese favorites. They produced the Hasta Be Pasta line of pasta dressed with traditional sauces, a line of antipastas as well as grab-and-go snack wraps. “It’s very tasty,” promises Gianpaolo. Now Hasta distributes its portable product at Wildberries Marketplace, the Murphy’s Markets, North Coast Co-op, Eureka Natural Foods, as well as HSU’s on-campus stores. “More is coming!”

THORNTON ON THE SCAFFOLD, WORKING THE FINAL COLORS OVER THE UNDERPAINTING.

The Big Cheese

A new muralist climbs the scaffolds

By Ken Weiderman

artbeat@northcoastjournal.com

“I want people to think of Lucas Thornton when they think of murals in 20 years,” says Lucas Thornton. Confident and proud after completing his latest large-scale achievements both at home and internationally, the local artist and up-and-coming muralist spares no syllables when discussing his long-range plans. “If I could have a mural lined up every three months I would,” Thornton says with a grin. “It’s just what I want to do. I want to paint murals for people.”

At his home studio in Eureka, Thornton is taking a break from shaping a new surfboard dedicated to his dear, departed cat. Leaning into an old, squeaky, wooden chair, his eyes flicker above high cheekbones and a dimpled chin. An easel to his right holds an in-progress oil painting, and sketches, frames, rulers and clippings are hung from every available surface. Thornton pulls a triangular contour line drawing off the wall and uses it as a reference to talk about the mural he’s recently completed at the Cypress Grove creamery in the Arcata Bottoms.

Located at 1330 Q St. a few blocks off

11th Street, the nearly 600-square-foot painting fills the front of a newly renovated 100-year-old barn. The scene is idyllic, reflecting the pastures of the Arcata Bottoms. Rolling hills are dwarfed by huge curling clouds, a country road meanders past a canary yellow house and, of course, goats bask in a sunny field, munching on grass and gazing at passers-by.

In 1988, a store filled the barn and the married owners commissioned Ken Jarvela to paint a pastoral scene that included cows and such personal touches as the couple’s favorite horse and a portrait of the husband. Created with conventional house paint in just six days, time had reduced Jarvela’s painting to flecks of color and bare redwood planks. Cypress Grove put out a call to artists to restore the faded image, selecting Thornton’s proposal over 10 other competitors.

It’s no small feat to design, plan and complete a mural of this size, but Thornton is no stranger to the process. At 15, he began painting murals with Duane Flatmo’s Rural Burl Mural Bureau and was immediately hooked by the sheer scale of the images they created. While other young students came and went, Thornton stuck to it, eventually apprenticing under Flatmo and assisting in the repainting of numerous murals throughout the county (including the newly-finished Bucksport mural in Eureka).

However, the time comes when fledglings need to spread their wings and Thornton jumped at the chance to begin building his own mural reputation with the Cypress Grove barn. Besides, he says, “I personally love goats.” He frequents the Sequoia Park petting zoo, where he’s got a hairy-chinned buddy “with a harelip and half an ear missing ... we’re like this (putting his fist to his chest), butting our heads together.”

After some research at Cypress Grove’s dairy in Dow’s Prairie, Thornton got to work drawing out the image, loosely basing it on Jarvela’s original. It wasn’t until he had the 30-foot scaffolding up and started prepping the surface that he realized exactly what he’d gotten himself into. Wood fibers sloughed off at the slightest touch. The entire thing had to be scraped and coated with a flexible sealant to fend off the sun, rain, bird poop and acidic redwood tannins. Eventually, Thornton was staring at massive blank canvas.

He gridded it out to match his 1-inch to 1-foot scale drawing, then stunned everyone by painting the entire first layer in strictly sienna and magenta tones. This style of underpainting comes from Thornton’s studio experience. Rather than drawing the initial image with graphite or charcoal, painting it in with a neutral color allows him to establish the values and evaluate the overall composition more accurately. It also “keeps people guessing” as they watch the image unfold monochromatically before he fills it in with vibrant color.

As Thornton talks about the mural painting process, it’s clear that he’s in love with the entire aesthetic experience. Unlike the solitary painter toiling away in a lonely studio, a muralist is “surrounded by the birds chirping and the sun beating down and the wind blowing and people coming by and talking.” There’s also an historical connection, walking in the footsteps of eons of painters who’ve decorated walls before him. Thornton describes the “nostalgic feeling” of climbing up the scaffolding, hoisting up his bucket of paint hand over hand with a pulley and rope, and moving methodically over the surface again and again. “Not that I’m comparing myself to Michelangelo, but he had to do the same thing!” he says.

Immediately after finishing the Cypress Grove mural, Thornton hightailed it to Costa Rica to complete another mural commissioned by a surf photographer who saw him working on the Bucksport wall. Now, he’s in between, waiting for that next opportunity to scale a wall and fill it with color. He sees all of his murals as his “little babies.” He says, “You kind of fall in love with that little place that you were at for a month. It’s great to experience that place you would have otherwise never gone to.”

With the light and warmth lasting well into the Arts Arcata evenings now, Ken Weiderman encourages everyone to walk or drive over to Q Street to see this marvel. A link to the time-lapse video of the in-progress mural can also be found at northcoastjournal.com ●

The Big Mad

Dell'Arte leads a summer-long festival

By William S. Kowinski

stagematters@northcoastjournal.com

For more than a generation, it's been mad in Blue Lake in June, ever since Dell'Arte created the Mad River Festival of stage performances. The festival got pretty hefty for a while in the '90s, and in more recent years it's been smaller. But this year it's bigger than ever, absorbing seven weeks of the summer with much more than the usual number and variety of events starting June 19 and ending August 3.

There's more music: in addition to the traditional Folk Life Festival from July 14 to July 19, there's also a Blue Lake Blues Festival on August 2 and the Eureka Symphony performing Prokofiev's Peter and the Wolf on July 26. (Last summer's Dell'Arte Life Achievement Award winner and Dell'Arte founder Jane Hill was recently named Eureka Symphony's first-ever executive director.)

A major catalyst for the festival's expansion is a big ArtPlace America grant, which accounts for several Blue Lake-centered events, many of them free, including Blue Lake: The Center of the Universe Party on June 29 and the Trash Mash-Up community workshops from July 10 through 13. There are additional Blue Lake venues, such as Perigot Park and the banks of the Mad River, where Laura Munoz will lead One Multitude, a "movement choir" of 50 participants of all ages performing at sunset on June 25.

There's a new performance venue, as well. In addition to the Rooney Amphitheatre and Carlo Theatre, several shows appear in the new Pierson Building Center

Big Hammer Tent, adding a circus big-top topography to the summer madness.

That's particularly apt since this summer's Prize of Hope (given by Dell'Arte in conjunction with the Danish Institute of Popular Theatre) goes to Clowns Without Borders International. The award dinner is on June 28. The following day, Mooky Cornish, former lead clown for Cirque de Soleil, leads a benefit performance for Clowns Without Borders before entertaining at the Center of the Universe party in the big tent. Cornish also performs a comic solo show, The Glories of Gloria Revue, July 10 through July 13 at the Carlo.

In addition to the annual Red Light in Blue Lake adult cabaret (July 5) and the acrobatic performance (this year called Taken Away, performed five times between June 21 and June 27), there are several other stage events.

Mad Lab (July 2) is an evening of works-in-progress by Dell'Arte School grads Meghan Frank, Janessa Johnrude, Emily Newton and Darci Fulcher. July 23 is the official world premiere of Elisabeth's Book, created by performers Joan Schirle, Laura Munoz and Ruxandra Cantir and director Alain Schons, with original music by Schirle, Gina Leishman and Tim Gray. Drawn from a Holocaust survivor's memoir, the music and movement-based play runs through July 27.

On July 31, Jeff DeMark brings his band The Gila Monsters (Rick Levin, Ron Sharp, Jean Browning and Paul DeMark) for an evening of music and stories about summer called Acting On A Dream (and of course, there's a story about the title). Besides Jeff, storytellers include Marvin Samuels, Lizzy Moonbeam and Charlie Gilbert.

But it all starts with the big show in the amphitheatre beginning June 19 and continuing for three weekends. Korbel V: The Secret is the latest in Dell'Arte's outrageously epic working class soap opera that has seen death, a wedding, a birth and a fateful accident amidst much local color and family angst.

This summer's story finds the surly and unemployed Tommy Dugan living in a ramshackle trailer, eventually confronting the Korbel Timber Company as it evicts workers' families from company housing. It's written and directed by Lauren Wilson, who wrote the memorable 2010 summer show, Blue Lake: The Opera. Returning are Michael Fields as Tommy and Joan Schirle as his mother Dorothy, who, despite having died in the first play, has appeared in all the sequels. Music is provided by Marla Joy, Tim Randles and Mike LaBolle.

In a TV commercial for the festival, Fields as Tommy Dugan describes the show: "They say it's a comedy but my life ain't so funny to me." That nails the mood of this series. It's been satirical, melodramatic and over the top, but with heart and eyes open to the Humboldt of the moment. Off-camera, Fields said, "It is pure 'theatre of place,' Dell'Arte style ... I don't know of another theatre that follows characters over decades with keen attention to the times, looking at it all through the lens of place."

Dell'Arte offers a festival pass to any four shows plus some extra benefits. 668-5663. www.dellarte.com.

Coming Up: Thursday, June 12 at Ferndale Repertory Theatre is an actors benefit performance of the ongoing production, The Dixie Swim Club by Jessie Jones, Nicholas Hope and Mamie Wooten. All proceeds on this night go to cast and crew. Otherwise the production continues Fridays and Saturdays at 8 p.m. and Sundays at 2 p.m. through June 22.

This comedy portrays four North Carolina reunions of five women, college swimming teammates, who get together one weekend a year for 33 years. Directed by Leira V. Satlof, it features Marilyn McCormick, Marilyn Foote, Rae Robison, Dana Zurasky and Natasha White. Scenic design is by Ray Gutierrez, with costumes by Lynnie Horrigan. 786-5483. www.ferndalerep.org. ●

A SUNDAY DINNER THAT DOESN'T EAT YOUR SUNDAY.

Pop Roast

Beer and beef. Happy Father's Day.

By Jennifer Fumiko Cahill

tabletalk@northcoastjournal.com

Even amid sea changes in family and gender roles, with parents sharing more equally in childrearing and wage-earning duties, Father's Day continues to kind of suck rocks. More and more dads are changing diapers and making dinner, so where are the brunches and spa days? Where is the birthstone-encrusted man jewelry?

One mother I know, who shall remain nameless, even forgot Father's Day all together a few years ago. OK, I did that. And the "Surprise Father's Day" I tried to pull off a few weeks later did nothing to assuage my rightful mortification.

I offer this recipe — something fathers will love cooking and eating — by way of universal apology. It's from my husband's paternal grandmother from Oklahoma, where beer was cheap and soy sauce was an exotic ingredient. The sliced beef falls apart and the gravy is gravy — a rich, dark and roasty sauce you will want to mop up with bread (and later, alone in the kitchen, with fingers). It's also shockingly easy. Just dump beer, soy sauce and meat in a Dutch oven, then a little thickening for the gravy. No browning, no turning, nothing. Put it in the oven and walk away.

But shouldn't you at least ... No. Walk away. Watch the game, read a book — whatever it is you usually dream of doing when you're trapped at the stove. If you need carrots and potatoes with your pot roast, you can toss small potatoes and chunks of carrot in the pot for the last 20 to 30 minutes. Otherwise, relax. Maybe call your dad.

Beer Pot Roast

Cooking this a day ahead just makes it better. The traditional beer is cheap and canned, yielding a mild gravy with some depth, but a stout will give it a heavier Guinness stew flavor.

Ingredients and method:

1 chuck roast (3 to 4 pounds)
1 can of beer
1/3 cup soy sauce
1/4 cup flour or cornstarch mixed with water until runny

Preheat the oven to 325 F. Rinse the roast and pat it dry. Trim the excess fat on the outside and place the roast in a heavy, oven-proof pot with a lid. Pour in the soy sauce and the beer. Cover it and place it in the oven for 3 hours, until tender. A 4-pound roast may need 3½ hours.

Remove the meat and let it rest for 15 minutes before slicing. Meanwhile, skim some of the fat from the juice in the pot and whisk in the flour or cornstarch until it's as thick as you like. Slice the meat and return it to the gravy. Serve with egg noodles, rice or a pile of mashed potatoes. ●

Enchantment

Breaking Away From the Expected

By Jennifer Savage

thesetlist@northcoastjournal.com

Hello! I'm here to tell you about some live music performances that will enhance your life, make you more attractive to others and ensure that you don't become the kind of person binge-watching reality TV.

Don't say I didn't tell you

Here are some reasons you want to go to the Palm Lounge on Friday night:

You love objectively fun music.

You're a rocker.

You remember Automatic Pink. You know, from back in the 20th century.

You belong to that Humboldt County Punk Scene 1970s to Current Facebook group.

You like your power pop crunchy, your punk rock anthemic, your indie pop effervescent and your new wave spunky.

You enjoy being in a room full of people similarly inclined.

You dig DJs Red and Zephyr.

You're curious about Eureka's newest all-star lineup, Scary Photographs.

The Palm Lounge is a cool space.

The bartenders made up drinks named after local artists.

Please take yourself there at 8 p.m. You can expect music to start at 9 p.m. sharp, says Courtney Luv — oh, that reminds me, The Lost Luvs are going to pave the way for a trip down Nostalgia Lane with Automatic Pink songs. Go to this show. You're welcome. (Pre-gig dinner suggestion: Kyoto Sushi.)

Goin' South

Another Friday night option is The 10 Man Brass Band and Sambamore turning Siren's Song Tavern into a night of New Orleans with drums, brass, jazz, pop, funk, Latin, Balkan and electronica. Show starts at 9 p.m., is free and all ages. (Pre-gig dinner suggestion: Bless My Soul!)

That's a lot of pieces!

Relatively new 17-piece Nigerian Afrobeat group Lagos Roots plays at The Jam-balaya on Saturday. I predict much amazement as the band takes the crowd straight to 1970s West Africa. This show starts at 9 p.m., has a $10 cover and is 21-and-over. (Pre-gig dinner suggestion: 3 Foods.)

Sunday! Sunday! Sunday!

Perhaps your father would like to celebrate his day with a jazz jam. La Musique Diabolique will oblige at the Morris Graves Museum of Art from 2 to 4:30 p.m. Cover is $5 adults, $2 seniors and students with ID, and free to children under 17 — the whole family can enjoy the gypsy jazz style pioneered by Django Reinhardt and Stéphane Grappelli in the 1930s. La Music Diabolique boasts a repertoire that includes jazz standards,

FOR COMPLETE DETAILS, VISIT THE PLAYERS CLUB BOOTH.

The dancers from The Upper Studio present Carnival of the Animals (feathers, fur and tutus!) and excerpts from Paquita (Gypsies, Spaniards and tutus!) on Friday, June 13 at 8 p.m. and Saturday, June 14 at 1 p.m. and 7 p.m. ($10) at the Redwood Raks dance studio. Both ballets are geared toward children, with vibrant costumes and playful music.

Supposedly, there's no room for politics in polite conversation. That's just fine for long-time comedian Will Durst — he's not trying to be polite. The comedian performs his one-man show BoomeRaging: From LSD to OMG at the Arcata Theatre Lounge on Friday, June 13 at 8 p.m. ($15 at the door, $10 in advance) and at the Mateel Community Center on Saturday, June 14 at 8 p.m. ($10).

Steampunks and BBC fans unite! Grab your pipe and deerstalker hat for Sherlock Holmes and the Steampunk Murder Mystery at the Siren's Song Tavern on Saturday, June 14 at 7 p.m. ($5). The game is afoot!

Aw, Shucks

Humboldt County welcomes the summer with a traditional bivalve brouhaha and beer to boot. Every June, the Arcata Plaza is overtaken by keg-tappers, shell-shuckers and hullabaloo-havers for the Arcata Bay Oysterfest. This year, the melee of mollusks and merriment takes place on Saturday, June 14 from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. (free). That's right — it's free this year, but the fence is around to stay.

Local eateries and chefs take to their booths to serve a slew of locally produced shellfish, each recipe as mouthwatering as the next. Most of the oysters come straight from Humboldt Bay, so partaking is pretty much a civic duty. Wash down the slippery sustenance with a cold beer from any one of the local brewery booths, then peruse the vendor tables, games and children's activities. If oysters aren't your slimy cup of tea, that's okay; you'll have plenty of other delicacies to choose from.

The Striped Pig Band, DJ Stir Fry Willie, Motherlode and more local bands take the stage throughout the day, so there's never a dull moment. The festival wouldn't be complete without the ridiculous spectacle of the Oyster Calling and Shuck and Swallow contests. It's a hyper-local extravaganza of gluttony and excess, so show up with an empty stomach and an inclination for shellfish shenanigans.

Something's Fishy

There's no better time for a good, old-fashioned fish fry than Father's Day. On Sunday, June 15 from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m., the 57th annual Trinidad Fish Fest (free) takes over Trinity Street. That means you have five hours to take in all the vendors, crafts, live music and food, so much food. It's a challenge, but we think you're up to the task.

You can start the day with a guided tour of Baker Beach at 7 a.m., or you can wait until the barbecues start smoking at 11 a.m. Participation in the festival is free, but the delicious barbeque will cost you $13 for adults and $8 for kids under 12. After you've filled up on fish, you can check out the tables and booths filled with wares and crafts, or you can take a tour of the Trinidad Head Lighthouse (free). You can hike to the head or take a convenient shuttle to the top; it really depends on how full you are and how much you like lighthouses.

Humboldt State University's Marine Lab (free) will open its doors from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., so you and the kids can check out the creatures the biologists have on hand. Then there's the live music. The bluegrass blowout includes The Downriggers at 11 a.m., the Pilot Rock Ramblers at 12:15 p.m. and the Jim Lahman Band at 2 p.m. Round out the day with some funky soul jams from Vintage Rock N Soul at 3:45 p.m. The Fish Fest tips the scales when it comes to fun, so be prepared for any-fin.

Top Chef

Edge is dull, Fault charms

By John J. Bennett

Reviews

CHEF. I will say, with no reservations (sorry), that I enjoyed this more than any movie this year. There've been bolder statements, as 2014 hasn't exactly been a banner year so far. But for me, Chef lives in the rarefied air of legitimately great mainstream American cinema. It's not a crazy tone poem, an oblique meditation on death or a confrontational exercise in style; it is a good story, exceedingly well told, with a warmth and fullness that, mishandled, might spell doom. Thanks to writer/director/star Jon Favreau, though, the movie's big-heartedness is tempered with cynicism and snark to avoid feeling cloying or trite. Just as he was able to find the humor and humanity in organized crime in Made (2001), Favreau sees past the tattoos, tequila and tough talk of chef culture to get at some of the essential truths, good and bad, that unify us.

When he started out in Miami, chef Carl Casper (Favreau) was one of the rising stars of the culinary scene, some kind of rebel savant. Now, a decade later in Los Angeles, real life has drained some of his juice. He's head chef at a successful French place, sure, but he's getting dangerously bored cooking the same menu every night. The job still takes up most of his waking hours, including time that would be better spent bonding with his young son Percy (Emjay Anthony) or mending fences with ex-wife Inez (Sofia Vergara). When Carl learns that a prominent food blogger will be reviewing the restaurant, it renews his enthusiasm for the work. He pours himself into a special menu, only to be talked out of it by his tyrannically profit-minded boss Riva (Dustin Hoffman). A negative review follows, which in turn sends Carl into a tailspin of Twitter reprisal and terrible, hilarious face-to-face confrontation. None of which escapes the ever-vigilant eye of the Internet at large. Jobless and notorious, he can't get anybody except Inez's weird publicist to return his calls. So he accepts his ex-wife's invitation to join her and Percy on a trip to Miami, where she sneakily turns him into a food-truck owner, reintroducing him both to his son and to his love of cooking.

Chef is equal parts romance, comedy, road movie and kitchen verité, and for me every element of it works. Favreau's Carl is utterly believable as a remarkable talent stymied by the expectations and safety of routine. Anthony gives an impressively subtle performance as a son desperate to spend time with his dad, but too smart and mature to give in to fits of anger or sadness. It's no small thing to pull off, and a testament to both actor and director that a 10-year-old should acquit himself so well. (It helps to act in a movie packed with top-notch performers doing remarkable work — Scarlett Johansson, Robert Downey Jr., Bobby Cannavale and John Leguizamo appear in roles of varying size but uniform quality.)

OF POLITICS, PEOPLE AND ART

Chef manages to speak to a moment in contemporary culture with a light enough touch that it doesn't feel like pandering now, and likely won't feel dated later. Favreau takes on social media both as an identifier of the generation gap and as a vital element of modern life. But he does it so deftly that it feels completely natural, completely authentic. He lends the same attention to the details of kitchen culture and cooking technique: The movie is seasoned liberally (sorry again) with gorgeous food preparation sequences and hilarious behind-the-scenes restaurant insights that add depth and nuance. Their addition produces something truly special. R. 115m.

EDGE OF TOMORROW. Tom Cruise and Emily Blunt star as future soldiers, waging a war against vaguely arachnoid aliens with a shared consciousness. For some reason, he's stuck in a time loop that the pair learns to manipulate for the good of humanity.

Both leads give compelling performances, and some of the battle sequences are exciting, but the direction is too focused on slickness and largesse, not enough on character or story. And even though the premise is undeniably clever, I think the writers are a little too proud of their creation for its own good. The resulting narrative is irretrievably muddled, and the movie as a whole is expensive-looking, competently made and also totally forgettable. PG13. 113m.

THE FAULT IN OUR STARS. At least one young woman in the audience brought a whole box of tissues in to the theater with her. She planned well; by the end credits, the crowd (mostly female, mostly under 25) was all sniffles and sobs. Even if one doesn't fit the target demographic, The Fault In Our Stars may still draw forth some tears.

Hazel Grace Lancaster (Shailene

Woodley) has terminal cancer, a withering wit and a misguided assumption that boys don't like her. Augustus Waters (Ansel Elgort), a cancer survivor, handsome and a real nerd, sees it as his duty to disabuse her of that notion. Together they navigate love, death and eventually the canals of Amsterdam.

At my wife's urging, I read John Green's book, upon which this is based. It struck me as well crafted, if a little indulgent in terms of nerdy writer wish fulfillment. Even though the movie retains that tenor, the strength of the lead performances and the goodness shooting through it won over even me. PG13. 126m.

Previews

22 JUMP STREET. Channing Tatum and Jonah Hill graduate to college buffoonery in the buddy-cop-comedy sequel. R. 112m.

HOW TO TRAIN YOUR DRAGON 2. Hiccup, his dragon pal and a village full of Vikings with Scottish accents return in the sequel. PG. 102m.

IDA. A young woman about to become a nun delves into her true identity and her family's history during the Holocaust. PG13. 80m.

PALO ALTO. A moody drama from another Coppola (Gia this time) has lonely teenage girls and boys longing for affection and doing reckless things. R. 100m.

Continuing

GODZILLA. The big guy returns with puny, human co-stars Aaron Taylor-Johnson and Ken Watanabe. The effects impress, but there's too much going on to focus on the lizard and its destructive glory. PG13. 123m.

MALEFICENT. An atmospheric, good-looking fantasy with a sharpened Angelina Jolie as the fairytale party crasher from Sleeping Beauty. Heavy on CGI, light on character and not quite scary enough. PG. 98m.

A MILLION WAYS TO DIE IN THE WEST. And none of them live up to the MacFarlane brand or the rest of the top-shelf cast (Charlize Theron, Liam Neeson and Neil Patrick Harris) in this Western comedy. R. 116m.

NEIGHBORS. Suburban parents (Rose Byrne and Seth Rogen) go to war with the frat next door and their oft-shirtless prankster leader (Zac Efron) in this crude but effective comedy. R. 97m.

X-MEN: DAYS OF FUTURE PAST. The mutants go time traveling to save the world. Pacing and exposition are rocky, but the action and the cast make an enjoyable distraction. PG13. 131m.

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF ALICE LOUISE RIEDEL CASE NO. PR140154

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, ALICE LOUISE RIEDEL

A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by JANICE CONN AND BARBARA BISHOP In the Superior Court of California, County of Humboldt.

THE PETITION FOR PROBATE requests that JANICE CONN AND BARBARA BISHOP

Be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests the decedent's will and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by court. THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

CEQA NOTICE OF INTENT TO ADOPT A MITIGATED NEGATIVE DECLARATION

Pursuant to the California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA) Guidelines Section 15072 and Public Resources Code Section 21092, the City of Fortuna (City) is providing notice of intent to adopt a mitigated negative declaration for the "Rohner Creek Flood Control, Habitat and Seismic Improvement Project," as described below. The public is invited to comment on the proposed mitigated negative declaration pursuant to the provisions of CEQA. The review period is 30 days and commences on June 4th, 2014.

Written comments must be submitted to the City no later than July 3rd, 2014. The initial study and proposed mitigated negative declaration document is available for review during regular business hours at the City of Fortuna Community Development Department office located at 621 11th Street, Fortuna, California. Per CEQA Guidelines Section 15072 (g) (5) there are no known hazardous waste facilities or disposal sites on the project site.

The project is located within the incorporated City limits of the City of Fortuna within the Rohner Creek watershed, in Humboldt County, California. The project reach encompasses approximately 5,300 feet of the Rohner Creek channel and 2,300 feet of the Hillside Creek channel as well as portions of the Rohner Creek floodplain.

The project consists of in-stream channel improvements to Rohner Creek and Hillside Creek, the replacement of five bridges, a Rohner Creek field bypass swale and channel improvements through existing undeveloped agricultural pastures, and retrofitting of the 12th Street culvert. In stream improvements would achieve a 10-year flood capacity for Rohner Creek and 100-year flood capacity for Hillside Creek and the Rohner Creek field bypass swale.

The City will consider adoption of the proposed mitigated negative declaration on August 4, 2014, at the City's office located at 621 11th Street, Fortuna, California. Copies of the initial study and proposed mitigated negative declaration document are available for review at the City's office located at 621 11th Street, Fortuna, California. NOTICE OF PROPERTY TAX DELINQUENCY AND IMPENDING DEFAULT

Revenue and Taxation Code Section 3351, 3352

I, John Bartholomew, Humboldt County Tax Collector, State of California, certify as follows:

That at close of business on June 30, 2014 by operation of law, any real property (unless previously tax-defaulted and not redeemed) that have any delinquent taxes, assessments, or other charges levied for the fiscal year 2013-2014, and/or any delinquent supplemental taxes levied prior to the fiscal year 2013-2014 shall be declared tax-defaulted.

That unless the property is completely redeemed through payment of all unpaid amounts, together with penalties and fees prescribed by law or an installment plan is initiated and maintained; the property will become tax-defaulted and may be subsequently sold at a tax sale in satisfaction of the tax lien.

That a detailed list of all properties remaining tax-defaulted at the close of business on June 30, 2014, and not redeemed prior to being submitted for publication, shall be published on or before September 8, 2017.

That information concerning redemption or the initiation of an installment plan of redemption of tax-defaulted property will be furnished, upon request, by John Bartholomew, Humboldt County Tax Collector at 825 5th Street, Room 125, Eureka, California 95501 (707) 476-2450.

I certify or (declare), under penalty of perjury, that the foregoing is true and correct.

John Bartholomew
Humboldt County Tax Collector

Executed at Eureka, Humboldt County, California, on May 23rd , 2014. Published in the North Coast Journal on May 29th, June 5th, and June 12th , 2014.

NOTICE OF IMPENDING POWER TO SELL TAX-DEFAULTED PROPERTY

Revenue and Taxation Code Section 3361, 3362

Pursuant to Revenue and Taxation Codes sections 3691 and 3692.4, the following conditions will, by operation of law, subject real property to the Tax Collector's power to sell.

1) All property for which property taxes and assessments have been in default for five or more years.

2) All property that has a nuisance abatement lien recorded against it and for which property taxes and assessments have been in default for three or more years.

3) Any property that has been identified and requested for purchase by a city, county, city and county, or nonprofit organization to serve the public benefit by providing housing or services directly related to low-income persons and for which property taxes and assessments have been in default for three or more years.

The parcels listed herein meet one or more of the criteria listed above and thus, will become subject to the Tax Collector's power to sell on July 1, 2014, at 12:01 a.m., by operation of law. The Tax Collector's power to sell will arise unless the property is either redeemed or made subject to an installment plan of redemption initiated as provided by law prior to close of business on the last business day in June. The right to an installment plan terminates on the last business day in June, and after that date the entire balance due must be paid in full to prevent sale of the property at public auction.

The right of redemption survives the property becoming subject to the power to sell, but it terminates at close of business on the last business day prior to the date of the sale by the Tax Collector.

All information concerning redemption or the initiation of an installment plan of redemption will be furnished, upon request by John Bartholomew, Humboldt County Tax Collector, 825 5th Street, Room 125, Eureka, CA 95501, (707) 476-2450.

The amount to redeem, including all penalties and fees, as of June 2014, is shown opposite the assessment/parcel number and next to the name of the assessee.

PARCEL NUMBERING SYSTEM EXPLANATION

The Assessor's Parcel/Assessment Number (APN/ASMT), when used to describe property in this list, refers to the assessor's map book, the map page, the block on the map, if applicable, and the individual parcel on the map page or in the block. The assessor's maps and further explanation of the parcel numbering system are available in the assessor's office.
